APICS Announces 2014 North American Exam Pass Rates

APICS has published CPIM and CSCP exam pass rates for 2014 and the results are encouraging, at least for the CPIM program. The latest data shows the pass rate for Basics unchanged at 75%, but increasing for the other four modules as follows:

- MPR - from 68 to 69%
- DSP - from 62 to 68%
- ECO - from 64 to 76%
- SMR - from 57 to 65%

This is good news generally, but especially with regard to ECO and SMR. These exams, which are widely regarded as the most difficult in the program, both showed significant improvement Award designation, an admirable accomplishment for an APICS chapter.

As a member of an APICS Platinum Award Winning Chapter, the CBAR designation signifies your chapter's commitment to providing an exceptional membership experience.

over past years performance. In the past, APICS has stated their concern about the low SMR pass rate in particular and it appears that efforts to improve the rate have been paying off.

However, the CSCP rate dropped slightly from 2013's rate of 67% to 65% for 2014. This may not be significant in that the CSCP pass rate has been within the range of 65 - 68% for seven of the past eight years.

Although historical pass rates can be a general indicator of the difficult of a particular exam, the most important issue for certification candidates is their own specific degree of success in the exams. As we have stressed repeatedly in the past, the best way to increase your own chance of success is to attend the instructor-led classes offered by the chapter. For more information, please contact Jack Martis at jfm2620@comcast.net or 1-866-MY-APICS x 102.
